Curry Tells of County Plans For Receiving Home

COLUMBIANA, March 24—M. A. Curry, Columbiana county child welfare director, speaking at the meeting of the Kiwanis club Monday evening, told of plans for a receiving home for dependent children of the county, which will be provided with funds to be received for the county half interest in Fairmount Children's home, near Alliance, which is being disposed of to Stark county. The home was established by legislative enactment, which will also be required for dissolution of the partnership.

The proposed receiving home would accommodate children until suitable homes are found.

Rep. Leo Allen (R-Ill) fired back with another statement. He said congress can cut taxes and vote money for defense both if it "does not succumb to all the squandering whims of the New Deal bureaucracy supported by the greatest propaganda in the history of the world."

Will Not Wait

One administration lieutenant on Capitol hill said the President will not take advantage of the full 10 days to draft his veto. This official said the White House will be heard from by Monday, or Tuesday at the latest.

In this connection, Truman went over the government spending picture yesterday with his military chiefs and Budget Director James E. Webb.

There was no official announcement after the meeting, but officials let it be known that the $39,700,000,000 budget which the President sent to congress in January may be hiked by three or even five billion dollars.

Republican leaders nevertheless were unanimous in predicting that both houses will vote to override. "The tax cut is certain," Speaker Martin (Mass) reiterated to reporters. Rep. Knutson (Minn), author of the original reduction bill, and Senator Taft (Ohio), chairman of the senate's GOP policy committee, agreed.

Democratic opponents gloomily conceded in private that they have no hopes of upholding the tax cut veto.

Effective May 1, all tax withholdings from pay envelopes and salary checks would be reduced to conform with the lower taxes. Next year the taxpayers would get re-

XXXIV
ONCE again it was morning. Surprisingly she had slept well, soundly. And she awakened to the smell of coffee perking in the kitchen, the crackling of fresh logs in the fireplace, the sounds of Rush made moving about the kitchen.

She stretched, under the light covers, yawned and stretched again. She blinked against the bright sunshine that streamed in through the open windows. She yawned widely and rolled over.

Rush was standing in the doorway looking at her. She looked back at him, a straightforward unafraid look, and she thought to herself, I'm going to pretend I don't know. I'm going to pretend everything is just the way I thought it was going to be. I'm going to close my eyes and then, when it comes...

"Good morning, darling," Rush said. "Sleep well?"

"Wonderfully," she announced, sitting up. "That coffee smells heavenly."

"Bacon and eggs coming right up," he told her and went back into the kitchen.

It was difficult for her to believe, as she and Rush took their breakfast trays to the big screened porch that overlooked the lake, and sat there eating bacon and eggs and hot toast and butter coffee, that they were not just a couple of ordinary people, a man and wife off for a few days alone, happy and healthy and enjoying themselves. Part of the difficulty in believing it, she realized, lay in her reluctance to believe evil of Rush; indisputable as the evidence was, every fibre of her being ached to deny it. But wanting something—even as dreadfully as she wanted to believe Rush—wasn't enough. She couldn't change the facts.

IT was almost noon when Rush suggested the canoe ride. They'd just been lazing around all morning, lying on the hot sand in their bathing suits, soaking up the sunshine.

"Haven't been canoeing for ages," he said thoughtfully, scowling into the sun. "Do you suppose I could manage one?"

"Probably," she said tranquilly. "Probably you could." If her heart beat a little faster there was no way he could know it.

It took him an hour to lug the canoe from the boathouse where it had been stored, clean it all out, find the backrest, hunt for pillows.

All the while he was getting ready she kept lying on the sand, thinking to herself. When he's all set I won't go. I'll say I don't like happy and healthy and enjoying myself. I'll say I don't feel up to it. I'll say...

And then Rush was saying, "O.K., honey, let's go," and she was getting to her feet and walking across the sand to the dock. It was as though she were hypnotized.

She said, as he helped her into the canoe, "Don't go out very far, Rush. I don't swim well, you know."

He flashed her a strange look. "You're not going swimming, angel puss," he said. "You're going canoeing."

It was fun, at first, going up the waves with one sweep of the paddle, then down them. It was like a midjet roller coaster; it didn't take your breath away the way a roller coaster did but it gave you the same gone feeling in the pit of your stomach.

Then it happened.

The only odd thing about it was that, when it came, it was so unexpected.

RUSH said, "Look at the freighter," in the most natural tone in the world and she turned around to look. The freighter was there, highlighted against the blue sky; she looked at its black hulk for a moment and then turned around to say something to Rush and found him leaning toward her, handing her a cigarette.

Something as simple as a cigarette. She stretched forward to take it and, incredibly as it seemed, Rush was suddenly jerking out of his seat, falling forward. She knew she screamed as he touched her, she knew she didn't conceal the terror she felt, and then they were floundering in the water.

In some small part of her brain she thought, This is it. Here we go. Except there was something wrong.

This was the journey she was to take alone. Rush wasn't supposed to go with her. Yet here he was, floundering beside her in the water. She wondered about that.

But then she had time only for fighting. The waves, which had been fun to ride over, became personal implacable enemies.

She went under and gasped and struggled and came back up and saw the canoe floating upside down only a short distance away.

"Ann! Ann!" It was Rush shouting to her but she went under again before she could make out what he was saying.

When she came up this time she was winded and choking and close to exhaustion.

Beside her ear Rush said, "Ann!" She managed to turn in his direction.

"Ann, here." He was holding out his arm.

She gave a great sob and reached for him, felt the strength of him, felt the great kicking of his feet tread water, churning it up.

"I — you — it wasn't — another minute —" she gasped the words out.

"Shut up!" He held her close. "You silly fool, don't you know—" She opened her eyes and looked at him. His face was filled with fury. She heard him say, "Oh, ye gods! Ann!" and then slowly, inexorably, he drew her down under the water.

Mullins Wraps Up City Class A Title With 45-42 Victory

Culler's Chargers Defeat United Tool In Tight Tilt

BY BOB DIXON

Climaxing a late season drive the Mullins Manufacturers last night pinned a final 45-42 defeat on the United Tool & Die cagers to clinch the Salem city championship, in a thrilling game that marked the end of local league play. A capacity crowd jammed the Memorial building to watch the two teams play the rubber game in their playoff series.

United started fast, aided by some wild Mullins passing, and rolled up a 7-0 lead before the Manufacturers could gather any momentum. However, Mullins pared the lead a point to trail 13-7 at the quarter point. In the second, the Toolers were and Lindsay called 17 personals on each club. Superior rebounding was the answer to Mullins' edge. They consistently took three and four shots at the hoop, while United could get only one before losing the ball.

Martinelli caged 13 points for high honors, with Smith getting 12. Ray Kelly, who played a sweet rebounding game, gathered eight. The three, together with Kenny Shears and Frank Lanney, rounded out the most effective Mullins five.

Bill Schaeffer and Tom Nedelka saw early and late service, respectively.

United's scoring was evenly divided among four men, Dick Trelven, Dick Miner, Gordon Scott and John Pridon, with the latter netting 11.

It was a sweet victory for Mullins and their coach, Frank Culler. The Manufacturers faced an almost impossible task three weeks ago when they knew they had to win four out of five games from the first round winners to clinch the title.

The Manufacturers replace the Amvets as city champs.

Joe Check and Andy Lindsay of Youngstown officiated.

BARONS INDICATE THEY PLAN TO END PLAYOFFS QUICKLY

Take Measure of Providence Easily In First Fray At Cleveland Arena

By INS

A prediction that the playoff series with Providence will be over in four straight games came from the Cleveland Barons stronghold today as they celebrated their opening playoff victory over the Reds.

Sparked by Rookie Bob Solinger and Bobby Carse, who tallied twice each, the Barons had little trouble downing the Rhode Island Icers, 6-1, last night in Cleveland's arena.

Ab Demarco, Baron center, predicted that "it'll be over in Providence," obviously meaning that the Clevelanders will take their third and fourth straight games in the Rhode Island town Sunday and the following Tuesday.

The Barons, who have now run their unbeaten string to 28 straight games, meet the Reds again tonight on Cleveland ice.

Cleveland opened the scoring in the initial period as Solinger flashed two goals past Goalie Harvey Bennett. The only Providence goal was scored by Pete Kapusta in the final minutes of the second period.

The score remained 2-1 until the last frame when the Barons opened fire and poured four goals in the net to take an easy victory. Besides Carse's goals Ab Demarco and Church Russell added to the last period total.

Pete Leswick, only member of the Barons to make the American league All-Star team, was carried from the ice in the third period with a wrenched back and was taken to Huron road hospital for X-rays.

Elsewhere in the American league, the Buffalo Bisons took the opener from the Hershey Bears, 5-3, on Hershey ice in a best-of-three series. The contest was a costly one, however, as each squad lost a player, probably for the remainder of the playoffs.

Gordie Henry, goalie for the Bears, was taken from the lineup in the first period because of an injury, and Len Halderson, Buffalo center, broke a bone in his hand in the second frame.

New Haven nosed out a 2-1 decision over the Pittsburgh Hornets on New Haven ice to take the lead in the best-of-three playoff series between the league's second place teams.

Both teams scored once in the first canto. Bing Juckes tallied the winning goal for the Ramblers at 9:59 of the second period.

The Stanley cup playoffs open tonight in the National league with Toronto and Boston clashing on Toronto ice. New York meets Detroit on the latter's ice in the other senior circuit contest.

Carl Schroeder To Coach Once Again

SPRINGFIELD, O., March 24—Carl F. Schroeder, Springfield high school athletic director the last two years, resigned today "to return to the active coaching field."

He did not divulge his plans. Schroeder took over the athletic post here after serving as head football and basketball coach at Wittenberg college.

A graduate of Massillon High school and Wittenberg college, he also coached at Miami Military Institute; high schools at Logan, Salem and Newcomers-town, and Mount Union college.

Schroeder sent his resignation in a letter to School Supt. E. E. Holt. The school board, after accepting it, said it had picked no successor.

Schroeder currently is secretary-treasurer of the Ohio High School Football Coaches Association.

Other high spots of the victory included Dale Mitchell's return to batting form and Hank Greenberg's first appearance with the Tribe.

With Tribe President Bill Veck still hoping to obtain a starting pitcher or outfielder—using Catcher Jim Regan as bait, the performances of Tipton and Mitchell were doubly gratifying to Indians' Manager Lou Boudreau.

Al Gettel, Don Black and Bob Menefier, who are expected to round out the Tribe's "top five" on the mound, were slated to hurl here today against the Chicago White Sox. The veteran trio pitched the Indians to a 6-5 triumph over the potent New York Giants last Saturday.

Eddie Robinson, who has been sidelined several days with a wrenched knee, was back in uniform for batting practice yesterday. The handsome first sacker was ordered by physicians, however, to wait until the end of the week before returning to active duty.

TIPTON CERTAIN TO BE USED WITH TRIBE THIS YEAR

Shows Clutch Hitting In Indian 6 to 5 Victory Over St. Louis

(By Associated Press)

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., March 24—Husky Catcher Joe Tipton was tagged today as a rookie certain to stick with the Cleveland Indians because of his stick-work.

Tipton, who wielded a heavy bat to top the Eastern league crown with a .375 average last year, was the hitter who delivered in the clutch yesterday as the tribe edged the St. Louis Browns, 6-5, for its seventh exhibition win in 11 starts.

Ken Keltner was perched on second with the tying run in the seventh inning when Joe stepped to the plate. The stocky Georgian delivered a single to center, deadlocking the score, 5-5. The situation was duplicated in the ninth, when Tipton clouted another timely single to score Elbie Fletcher from second with the winning marker.

Other high spots of the victory included Dale Mitchell's return to batting form and Hank Greenberg's first appearance with the Tribe.

With Tribe President Bill Veck still hoping to obtain a starting pitcher or outfielder—using Catcher Jim Regan as bait, the performances of Tipton and Mitchell were doubly gratifying to Indians' Manager Lou Boudreau.

symbol of Courage to the March-born

In ancient times, amulets were worn to ward off evil. Today the superstition is discarded, but the sentiment remains. The aquamarine is by tradition the natal stone of those born in March. Clear, translucent star of the beryl family, it is said to render "unconquerable" the March born.
